The Furman Quartette appeared here last summer to the delight of those who were privileged to be present and a treat is in store for those who come and hear the entire club and orchestra. There are eighteen members and they will render a splendid program. The club is giving this entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the First Baptist Church. The admission will be thirty five cents for children and fifty cents for adults. Prof. Schaefer of the Greenville Woman's College is the director. He is a musical director of note and is quite an acquisition to the club. One of the main features will be the part which will be taken by the orchestra. This has won high praise this season and no doubt will come up to its reputation here. The club is making its spring tour over the state and will touch several towns en route, but Dillon, Bennettsville and Florence will be the only places visited in this section.

What profit a county if it raise $2,000,000 worth of cotton and send $2,000,000 away to the west for feedstuffs? It is swapping dollars. Hear Mr. Musser at the court house tomorrow.

TRIBUTE TO DEAD SOLDIER.

Editor Herald:—I hand to you a brief note for publication, as I see the honor paid to one of the boys that left his father's home and went with many of our other boys to the world war and paid the debt that we might be a safe people. Lonnie Proctor was born August 4, 1895, was wounded October 17, 1918, and died in a base hospital October 18, the day following. His remains reached home April 6th and were buried at Little Rock April 7th, 1921. The honor of the family and the honor given the memory of the young soldier was one of sublime beauty. How well the father, mother, brothers and sisters held up under their burden of sorrow. I send for publication the last request of a South Carolina volunteer as I think it appropriate just at this time. We hope this may be uplifting to many a loved one.

Lonnie never was away from his mother two nights at a time until he went to the war. He added to his name the word power.

O. C. Hayes.

THE LAST REQUEST.

The following lines were found upon the body of a South Carolina volunteer after he was killed at Dranesville, Va., December 20th, 1861.

Oh, carry me back to my own loved Carolina shore.

If on the battle field I fall, oh, take me home once more;

For I would silently rest beneath the bright blue sky.

With her green sod on my youthful breast, there let me lie.

Oh, boys, carry me back when the bloody strife is o'er

And a mother dear with a grateful tear will bless you evermore;

I know that you will not forget a brother's last request.

And if there be one comrade spared he'll take me home to rest

And tell the loved ones there, the mourning household band.

To meet me on the blissful shore of the bright spirit land.

Oh, boys, carry me back, carry me if I die;

Carry me home, no more to roam, there only I lie;

I had a dream last night so full of bliss.

My mother's hand was on my brow, I felt a sister's kiss.

I gazed on Pee Dee's stream and the old moss covered mill,

The wooden seat beneath the tree, the cottage on the hill.

Oh boys carry me there in the sight of our mountain blue;

In my native town there lay me down 'tis all I ask of you;

I saw too in my dream a maiden young and fair.

A gentle loving girl was she with sunny golden hair.

She was seated by my side and whispered vows of love.

Though she may never be my bride still we may meet above;

Oh boys carry me back there only would I sleep

And the maiden fair with the golden hair over the soldier's grave will weep.

This is a noble state and gentle hearts are here

To whisper kind and cheering words to the stranger volunteer.

But if on Virginia's soil I fall to rise no more.

Carry me back to my own loved Carolina shore.

Oh boys carry me back I'll ask no marble tomb.

But lay me down in the sacred ground of my own dear mountain home.

There is a lovely seat in the quiet churchyard shade

Beneath tall spreading oaks where I've oft in my boyhood stayed;

There the deep tones of the organ fall gentle on the ear

In the stillness of the Sabbath moon from the old church standing near;

Oh boys lay me there when my youthful course is run.

That a mother dear may shed a tear o'er the grave of her only son.

A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

(Written by a 13 year old Dillon girl.) Rebecca was all alone that night. Her father and mother had gone to a nearby village. "We will be back before night if nothing happens," said her father when he left. And now she was alone. Night was near and it was raining. Once she thought of going to her friend's home, Eleanor King. But what if her father and mother should come while she was gone? And besides, she thought "I can't go when it is raining so." Just then the roar of carriage wheels brought her to the door. But, alas! It was not her father. A young man, finely dressed, approached the door. "I am your cousin," he said as he met her. "I have never heard of me?" "No," she replied. "I have never heard my father or mother speak of you." Rebecca led the stranger into the house. They had been sitting in silence by the fire when he suddenly said: "If you please, I will have my supper and then I will retire." They went into the kitchen to eat supper, when he said: "Where is your father and mother?" "They have gone to the village but I fear they will not return," she replied. After eating they both retired. Rebecca, however, was soon awakened by someone walking overhead. She thought it strange that he should be walking around. Presently, with a rush down the stairs, the stranger jumped into the carriage and dashed away. It was plain now to Rebecca that the stranger was a burglar. "He must have taken mother's jewelry," Rebecca dressed and went upstairs as quickly as she could. As she entered the room she saw the chest upon and sure enough a diamond necklace, together with her mother's wedding ring and other jewelry were gone. Rebecca rushed out of the house and ran to the house of her friend, which was a mile away, to get help. As she neared the house there was the stranger's carriage in front of the house. Had he come there to rob also? Rebecca went into the back door, and on to Eleanor's room. Rebecca found out from her that the stranger had come there and asked for a night's lodging. Eleanor went at once to her father to get help. It was not long before the burglar was bound, hands and feet. The next morning he was taken to jail. Rebecca's father never ceased to praise her for her bravery and for saving her mother's jewels.
